In the construction of legal instruments, the object is, to get at the real meaning of the writer of them in such instruments & when you have done that you have got at the correct construction. And the rules of construction are more liberal in ~~the~~ regard to Wills & Testaments than to any other (legal papers) & the purpose of my father in putting this provision in his Will (& I think it was the main, if not the only) purpose, may be to provide for just such a contingency as did happen in the case of ~~his~~ This Child. One of his daughters - Penelope - married, after her father's death, Mr. R. Cox & died, leaving one child - Pierre B. Cox. Pierre grew to manhood & married. Pierre died, & a short time after his death, his wife gave birth to a child - a fully developed, healthy child. But this child lived only a few days, a week or so, perhaps, & died, leaving his mother,
