Elizabeth Loomis Battle

- March 24, 1932 - February 6, 2022
- Charleston, South Carolina

Elizabeth Loomis Battle died peacefully on Sunday morning, February 6, 2022, in Charleston, SC, after a brief bout with cancer.

Born in Omaha, Nebraska, on March 24, 1932, to Grace Loomis Battle and Richard Thomas Battle, Liz lived in many places around the world. After spending her childhood in Chattanooga, Tennessee and graduating from the Girls' Preparatory School there, she graduated from Radcliffe College in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and then lived in New York City, Manila, Jakarta, and Singapore with her then husband, Daniel Roberts.

Years after her return to New York City from Southeast Asia, she graduated from the Brooklyn Law School and practiced law for Dewey Ballantine LLP. After living in New York City and Southampton, NY, she then moved to Charleston, SC, in the Spring of 2012.

Her passions were the opera and flower arranging. She was the first female President of the Metropolitan Opera Club in NYC as well as a past Board Member of SpoletoUSA in Charleston. Her flower arrangements won awards as a member of the Southampton Garden Club and adorned her tables as she entertained in NYC, Southampton, and Charleston. She was a Social Member of the Meadow Club in Southampton, NY, and the Colony Club in New York City.

A graveside service will be held at 2 pm on Friday, February 11, 2022, at the Magnolia Cemetery in Charleston, SC. A memorial service will be held at a later date to be determined. Arrangements by J. Henry Stuhr, Inc. Downtown Chapel.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Philip's Church in Charleston, SC or any charity of your choice.

Meade Bridgers (2021)

July 3, 1940 - December 28, 2021

LEESBURG - Meade Bridgers, 81, died on Dec. 28, 2021 in Leesburg, VA following a long and heroic battle with Parkinson's Disease.

A longtime resident of Tarboro NC, she served for many years as the director of the Edgecombe County Cultural Arts Council and was the curator of the Blount-Bridgers House museum and Hobson Pittman Memorial Gallery located in Tarboro.

Ms. Bridgers was the daughter of Capt. Henry Clark Bridgers, Jr, USN of Tarboro, NC, and Margaret Lewis Bridgers of Durham, NC.

She was a graduate of The Madeira School in McLean, VA, and attended Vassar College in New York where she received her Bachelor of Arts degree in Greek. She later received her Master's degree in Arts and Classics from Johns Hopkins University in Maryland.

She began her career in arts and history as a research assistant in the field of archaeology, studying the history and culture of the Byzantine Empire. Her travels across Europe gave her a special appreciation for the cultural treasures of the world, and eventually she would incorporate those experiences into her work with the arts council.

Following a brief tenure in Washington, D.C., where she worked as a correspondent for the White House during the Lyndon B. Johnson Administration, she married and moved to Tarboro, NC.

She was the owner and operator of Tarboro's first bookstore, The Book Nook, a reporter for a short-lived local newspaper, "The Edgecombe Chronicle", and spent several years assisting in the production of finely crafted hand-made furniture.

She soon became involved in numerous programs and activities, including Preservation North Carolina, the Federation of North Carolina Historical Associations, the Colonial Dames, was a founding member of the Phoenix Historical Society, and was the first female member of the Tarboro Rotary Club. In 2017 she was inducted into the Twin Counties Hall of Fame.

As director of the Blount Bridgers House, she devoted her time to the betterment of the community. She became instrumental in the establishment of the Edgecombe ARTS program, and spent over two decades expanding the program to include various forms of art and culture, including the opening of the Hobson Pittman Memorial Gallery which featured works from Pittman, a celebrated local artist. In addition to opening the gallery, she penned, "The Poet's Palette," a brief biography of Pittman and a published chronicle of his work.

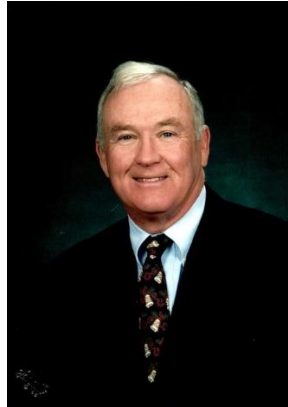

In reference to her position with the Arts Council, Ms. Bridgers once remarked, "Being the Director has given me a chance to utilize everything I've learned over the years. My mission is to help preserve and promote the cultural heritage of Edgecombe County. We're such a rich cultural community and so many people don't even realize it."

She was a longtime member of Calvary Episcopal Church, and sang in the church choir. Her love of music compelled her to join the Tar River Chorus, a local choral group that performed across the United States and Europe.

She is survived by her two children, Alix Horne Coolidge and Thomas Horne, both of Warrenton, VA, her sister, Penny Bridgers of London, England, and two grandchildren.

Charles Stewart Verdery (2021)

MARCH 13, 1942 – MARCH 17, 2021

Charles “Charlie” Stewart Verdery of Hanover, VA, passed away on March 17, 2021 at the age of 79 in Richmond, VA following a short and intense battle with cancer.

Charles was many things – a very successful businessman, an athlete and competitor, a nature lover, a collector, a blend of thriftiness and generosity, a man of habit who also liked to explore, and above all a family man. His is survived by his wife of 32 years, Martha Mebane Verdery. Charlie and Marty had a wonderful marriage, full of trips to Nags Head, birding trips across the country, dog walks, and watching and debating ACC sports. Meals on the back deck while birdwatching was a favorite pastime for decades. He will be missed greatly by his family, co-workers, and numerous friends across wide ranges of geography, age, and station in life.

Charles was born in 1942 in Augusta, Georgia as the fourth child of Albert Brantley Verdery (then stationed in the United Kingdom during World War II) and Louise Stebbins Ford Verdery. After growing up in Augusta, Georgia, New Bern, North Carolina, and Baltimore, Maryland, Charles graduated from St. Paul’s School for Boys in Baltimore in 1960, Kenyon College with a A.B in 1964, and the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania with a M.B.A. in 1966. Always looking for a business angle and apparently willing to work in any temperature, among his many jobs as a kid and student included: a paper route, bike repair, lawnmowing, selling snow cones, driving the golf range picker, library aide, ice block cutting, hay baling, construction, camp counselor, cafeteria worker, basketball court halftime sweeper, dorm mini-mart operator, lacrosse coach, driving a snowplow, and selling programs at JFK Stadium in Philadelphia.

After stints at Mobil in Tampa and Reynolds International in Richmond, Charles joined Sydnor Pump and Well (later Sydnor Hydrodynamics and now Sydnor Hydro) in 1971 as Chief Financial Officer, before buying the company in 1985 and serving as President for the past 36 years. Sydnor is known throughout the south for its 130-year history of pump and well sales, drilling water wells, installing residential water systems, and providing water services. Sydnor always has been known for a family atmosphere with incredible employee loyalty and longevity, starting with the Sydnor family and then through Charles' leadership – a tenure of ten years means you are still 'new.' While all six of his children or step-children worked briefly at Sydnor at some point, Charles' youngest son Brant continues the family tradition as Vice President at Sydnor.

Charles also served as owner of the River Golf Club in North Augusta, SC, and owner of the Artisan Aquafarm of South Mills, NC. Charles helped develop the River Golf Club from a new public club to one of the premier semi-private clubs in the Southeast. His insightful business and sporting advice to his middle son and club manager, Chris, was integral to the success of the club. Charles was quick to make friends with club members, taste test all the menu items, and jump in to clean carts and clubs when the club was busy. Charting his unusual golf cart paths via the GPS usually resulted in him explaining that he was chasing a rare bird or animal on the course.

'Charlie' or 'Chuck' was a star athlete in high school and college including all-city honors in lacrosse and football in high school as a running back and attackman, respectively, and All-American honors in lacrosse at Kenyon. At Kenyon he occasionally would suffer a dislocated shoulder. His friend Louie Berney noted that once when his shoulder came out, he had to wait two hours before being seen by a doctor but never complained: "That episode epitomized Charlie. He was not a grouser. He never felt sorry for himself."

He went on to referee high school and college lacrosse games in the Central Virginia area for decades and played on numerous softball squads into his later years, as well as being an avid golfer. He also coached numerous youth sports teams across several decades.

Charles was an active tennis player at Willow Oaks Country Club and Burkwood Swim & Racquet Club for more than 25 years. His friends knew him to be always ready to play (opening the can of balls was deemed a sufficient warm-up) and a tough competitor. But after a match Charles loved the opportunity to sit down and discuss just about any topic – from business to politics to sports to birdwatching. He had a keen mind, was well read, and ready to challenge conventional wisdom with a fresh viewpoint. But he also loved to laugh and proudly talk about family accomplishments. He was stimulating and fun to be around. Marty knew he would not be home quickly after an afternoon match.

Charles loved to explore our vast country and set an audacious goal of visiting every one of the 3142 counties in the United States, often in long road trips with his older brother Pete. Following itineraries that made sense only because Charles was avoiding interstate highways and crossing as many county lines as possible, they explored the South, the Upper Midwest and the West. Once arriving in a remote oil town in Montana, they were told that every hotel room had been booked for six months – “The bad news is that there aren’t any other hotels for 200 miles; the good news is that you can drive 100 miles an hour and nobody will care.” Into his late 70’s, he continued exploring, including a month-long trek with Louie into remote Alaska where they encountered a grizzly bear. When Louie wanted to keep snapping photos, Charles insisted they drive off – when Louie said he was safe behind the car door, Charles said he was not worried about Louie but he did not want to return a scratched rental car. He was able to cross the 50% county barrier last year.

His Augusta roots brought Charles back frequently to family events, his River Golf Club, and occasionally to play Augusta National. In 1987, he was able to bring his banker as a guest and when the banker somehow shot his career low round at the home of the Masters, Charles was told that every loan he needed for the rest of time was pre-approved. In 2015, his son Chris arranged a memorable day for Charles and all three of his sons at the National.

Among his many passions were their dogs, bird-watching and birds-spotted data tracking, beach fun in Nags Head, playing any activity that kept a score, completing a perfect yard clean up, getting up-and-down from impossible positions on the golf course, the annual Sydnor Christmas turkey distribution, puzzles, Parker’s Barbeque in Wilson, NC, and the Carolina Booze rotisserie baseball league. As a sports enthusiast, he closely followed teams from Clemson, UVA and UNC, each of which had family connections.

In addition to his wife Martha, Charles is survived by his three siblings, Albert Brantley Verdery, Jr., of Augusta, GA, Rieves Ford Verdery of Augusta, GA, and Alison Verdery Price of North Augusta, SC. He is also survived by: three children, Charles Stewart Verdery, Jr. and his wife Jenifer of Washington, D.C., Christopher Scott Verdery and his wife Mary Dawn of North Augusta, SC, and Albert Brantley Verdery III and his wife Angela of Richmond, VA, and their mother Linda Bond Verdery of Bremo Bluff, VA; and three step-children, William Albert Anderson, III and his wife Kristin of Durham, NC, Katherine Elizabeth Anderson of Silver Spring, MD, and Thomas Delton Anderson and his wife Gennifer of St. Augustine, FL. He is also survived by 15 grandchildren: Isabelle Anne, Charles Stewart III, Jack Benjamin, Cole Jag, Estee Lauren, Anna-Leah, Caroline Bond, Kathryn Michelle, and Peter Brantley Verdery; Mary Katherine, Amelia May, James Richard, Lucas Battle and Annabel Bailey Anderson; and Andrew Franklin Vogt.

Mary Parham Jackson (2018)

OCTOBER 28, 1942 – MAY 23, 2018

Mary Parham Jackson, 75, passed away on May 23, 2018. Mary was born in Granville County, North Carolina to the late Russell Johnson Parham and Eliza Lewis Parham on October 28, 1942, and grew up in Henderson, North Carolina. She attended Saint Mary's College and University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

She was an active member of Christ Episcopal Church in Raleigh. Mary will be remembered for her service to others in many capacities. She was a volunteer with Transitions LifeCare, she enjoyed knitting caps for newborns at Rex Hospital, and she lovingly supported underprivileged children on an international level. In her free time she enjoyed the beach, playing bridge, and spending time with her family.

She is survived by her children, Christopher Lawrence Jackson (Lorrie), Weldon Jackson Byrtus (Jimmy), and Russell Parham Jackson (Debbie); sister, Liza Parham Avery (David); grandchildren, Liza Byrtus and Waylan Jackson.

A memorial service to celebrate her life will be held on Wednesday, May 30, 2018 at 11 o'clock, at Christ Episcopal Church, 120 E. Edenton Street, Raleigh. A reception will immediately follow at the church. In lieu of flowers, please make memorial contributions to Christ Episcopal Church, Transitions LifeCare, Saint Mary's School, or to The Preston Robert Tisch Brain Tumor Center at Duke University.

Harry L. Hinson (2014)

Harry Hinson was a legend in the design world in New York and a descendant of Elisha Battle through a daughter who married a Horn. He was a distant cousin even if not of the James Smith Battle line.

HINSON--Harry Lee, III, a leading figure in the home furnishings industry, died in Manhattan on September 4, 2014. Hinson was born on March 30, 1938 in Rocky Mount, NC. After attending local schools, he went on to graduate from the Richmond Professional Institute of the Colleges of William and Mary in 1962. Immediately upon graduation, he joined the Executive Training Program at Bloomingdale's where he focused his interest on interior design and became assistant to the firm's widely acclaimed interior designer, Barbara Darcy. Following his successful launch into the international world of interior design, Hinson joined the illustrious retailer Bonwit Teller where he worked with the renowned store president Mildred Custin. Bonwit's, as the store was known, specialized in high-end apparel, catering to an elite "carriage trade." Hinson designed branch stores in the burgeoning suburbs of Westchester County, Long Island and major cities across the country and served as director of interior design for all of the Bonwit Teller stores. While still at Bonwit's, he and three other men opened the wallpaper and fabric firm, Quadrille, which continues to be a major supplier today. In 1971, Hinson inaugurated Hinson & Co., Ltd. It soon became the leading wallpaper and fabric firm in the United States. After Hinson's retirement the firm was acquired by Brunschwig & Fils and has subsequently closed. A lifelong member of the Episcopal Church, Hinson was active in both St. Bartholomew's and St. Thomas parishes in New York City. He was Commander in the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. In 1982, Hinson was chosen to design wallpapers and fabrics for the New American Wing Collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He was selected in 1985 to design the Wildflowers of America fabric and wallpaper collection for Lady Bird Johnson's National Wildflowers Collection. He was a member of the board of trustees of the Kips Bay Boys and Girls Club and served for thirty-three years to organize the Kips Bay Decorator Show House and also as its chairman for many years. He was a member of the board of directors of the Decorative Fabrics Association and a member of the American Society of Interior Designers. In addition to his apartment in New York City, Hinson was a longtime resident of East Hampton, Long Island, New York. At his request, there will be no burial or memorial service. His remains will be interred in the columbarium of the Chapel of The Resurrection at St. Thomas Church, Fifth Avenue, New York City. Harry Hinson is survived by his spouse Tripp March. Hinson and March were companions for twenty-eight years. They were married on June 6, 2013. Memorial contributions may be made to Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, 1275 York Avenue, New York, NY 10065.

Margaretta "Peggy" Calvert (2011)

| Visit Guest Book

Margaretta "Peggy" Calvert, accomplished artist and beloved wife of Vice Admiral James F. Calvert, died peacefully on March 19, 2011, at Beaumont at Bryn Mawr. She was 84. Peggy was raised in Ardmore, the second of five children born to Joseph Harrison, Jr. and Rita Heckscher Harrison. She graduated from the Shipley School and was Vice President of the Class of 1944. Following her marriage to Hyman L Battle, Jr., she moved to Princeton N.J., where she raised four sons and was an active member of the Princeton arts community. After her divorce, Peggy met and married Jim Calvert, at the time the youngest Admiral in the U.S. Navy. He was posted to the United States Naval Academy as Superintendent and together they spent four years as a dynamic team in a very public role. After the Navy, many successful years in business and numerous sailing adventures, Jim and Peggy retired to Beaumont. Their marriage lasted more than four decades and their final years at Beaumont were peaceful and happy before Jim's death in 2009. Peggy was a passionate and skilful painter. She studied at the Art Students League in New York and the Silvermine Guild of Artists in Connecticut. She apprenticed with Charles Reid, Ted Goerschner and Burt Silverman; they recognized and encouraged her talent. Whether a still life, pastoral scene or portrait, her canvases shimmered with light and color. Beaumont at Bryn Mawr is currently hosting an exhibition of over 60 of her paintings. Peggy's radiant vitality and wonderful sense of humor touched everyone she met. She was a cherished sister, devoted mother and grandmother, as well as a loyal and compassionate friend. She is deeply mourned and will always be deeply missed. She is survived by two sisters Henrietta Armit Marshall and Josephine Lea Bolling, two brothers, Stevens Heckscher Harrison and Joseph Harrison, III, four sons, Craig, David, John and Kemp Battle, two stepsons James and Charles Calvert as well as 14 grandchildren. A memorial service will take place at the Church of the Redeemer in Bryn Mawr at noon, Saturday April 2, 2011. In lieu of flowers, the family asks that contributions be made in her name to Heartland Hospice Memorial Fund, 333 N. Summit St., PO Box 10086, Toledo, Ohio 43699-0086 or make a donation online at www.heartlandhospicefund.org. Stuard F.H., Ardmore, Family owned since 1822.

J. Marshall Bruce Jr. dies at age 89.

A beloved eccentric who was a clinical psychologist and head of the English department at Boys' Latin School

August 01, 2010 By Frederick N. Rasmussen, The Baltimore Sun

J. Marshall Bruce Jr., a clinical psychologist and teacher who headed the English department at Boys' Latin School for more than two decades, died Wednesday of heart failure at the Presbyterian Home of Maryland in Towson.

The longtime Elkridge Estates resident was 89.

Mr. Bruce, the son of a Mount Royal Avenue automobile dealership owner and a homemaker, was born in Baltimore and raised on Greenspring Valley Road.

After graduating from Gilman School in 1939, he entered Princeton University, where he earned a bachelor's degree in 1943. He completed graduate studies at Harvard University and was a research fellow in clinical psychology at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

In 1953, Mr. Bruce was co-author with Dr. Caroline Bedell Thomas of "A Method of Rating Certain Personality Factors as Determined by the Rorschach Test For Use in the Study of the Precursors of Hypertension and Coronary Artery Disease."

Mr. Bruce had taught at the Severn School, St. Paul's School and the Hill School in Pottstown, Pa., before joining Boys' Latin in 1960 as assistant headmaster and English department chair.

Mr. Bruce's tenure at Boys' Latin began as the school moved from its old Brevard Street home in downtown Baltimore to its present location on Lake Avenue in North Baltimore.

During his 24-year career, Mr. Bruce had been dean of the faculty, director of guidance and counseling, chairman of the modern language department, senior prefect, director of the psychology seminar and adviser to the school newspaper.

"He was an icon and a giant here at Boys' Latin," said Lee McCardell "Mac" Kennedy, who graduated from the private school in 1976 and is the school's director of alumni affairs.

"He was an eccentric guy but well-loved within the Boys' Latin community. He was my adviser for four years and I knew him very well," Mr. Kennedy said.

"He was one of the best English teachers I ever had, especially with Shakespeare's 'Hamlet' and Tennessee Williams plays, especially 'Streetcar Named Desire.'"

Mr. Kennedy recalled that his teacher had an "incredible vocabulary and all BL students remember some of the multisyllabic words he taught us: excoriating, altruistic, sycophant, bombastic, titillating, elucidating, maudlin and vitriolic."

He said that Mr. Bruce carried a walking stick, which he dubbed an "Etonian beezer-bopper," and that his favorite expression was "I'll say!"

"He was an incredible teacher and he really made the school work," said Dr. Bruce L. Regan, a Baltimore psychologist who graduated from the school in 1966.

"He was a nervous, neurotic, nerdy guy who was a 'Mr. Chips' in need of Prozac, and I loved him," Dr. Regan said with a laugh.

"He was very bright and was incredibly interested in not only teaching English but getting us to think, read and write, and helping us how to make it in the adult world. He made you think whether you wanted to or not," he said.

Mr. Bruce was not a big fan of the high school sports "jockistic" culture, whose various aspects he more or less tolerated, Mr. Kennedy said.

"At a school like BL that wasn't too big in those days, everyone played a sport and especially lacrosse," Dr. Regan said. "But despite his anti-jock views, everyone loved Mr. Bruce. There was something about his personality and his dedication to teaching, and everyone had a great relationship with him."

Dr. Regan said his teacher had been a tremendous influence in his decision to become a psychologist.

A quiet, diminutive, modest figure, Mr. Bruce regularly shunned the spotlight, former students said.

For nearly 40 years until moving to the Presbyterian home, Mr. Bruce lived at nearby Elkridge Estates and each day walked from his home to school.

After retiring in 1986 he became something of a recluse, but while he wouldn't see former students, he'd talk with them by telephone.

Mr. Bruce was an accomplished jazz drummer and vibraphonist. "He also collected erotic art," said his niece and only survivor, Dancy Bruce Mills of Glen Arm.

At Mr. Bruce's request, no services will be held.

Marion Battle (2009)

Marion Somerville "Bugs" Battle Jr. died on Friday, Aug. 7, 2009. He was born in Roanoke on Aug. 29, 1923, the son of the late Marion Somerville Battle Sr. and Julia Ravenel Battle. He spent his teenage years in Lexington and attended Episcopal High School in Alexandria and the University of Virginia before enlisting in the armed services during World War II. He served in Germany, North Africa and Northern Italy.

After the war, he returned to UVa and subsequently moved to Houston, Texas, where he married his wife, Karolyn. They moved to Lexington in 1958 where they raised their four children. Locally, he is remembered as an investor in commercial real estate, including the former Kroger shopping center on the south side of East Nelson Street.

While they lived in Lexington, Karolyn Battle competed in the NBC television quiz show, "Jeopardy," in 1971, becoming the show's 77th undefeated champion. The couple retired to the Florida Keys in 1982, finally living in Ponte Vedra Beach.

He is survived by his four children and eight grandchildren. A memorial service will be held at Stonewall Jackson Memorial Cemetery this Saturday, Oct. 3, at 2 p.m.

Reine Battle (2008)

Publication: The Southampton Press

Jun 16, 2008 3:17 PM

Reine King Battle died on June 10 at Southampton Hospital. She was 64.

Born in 1944 in Ballina, County Mayo, Ireland, she was 12 years old when her mother died. She was sustained through her childhood by her father, an editor at The Irish Press, and her seven brothers and sisters.

After graduating from the Kings Inn Street Convent School, she attended University College Dublin where she began to study architecture, a discipline that became a lifelong passion. She emigrated to the United States in 1962 and worked in Manhattan for several real estate and investment firms before meeting and marrying Hyman L. Battle. According to the family, her devotion to him was the hallmark of her life. Together they travelled the world and made homes in Connemara, Ireland, and in Sagaponack, where she remained until her death. Survivors recalled last week that Mrs. Battle had a gift for creating beautiful space; she would transform an empty field into a home with wide windows and long views, and she would turn grass and stone to flower gardens and trees, meadows and bushes. She built two houses in Sagaponack that were much admired and refurbished an old Irish cottage into what some referred to as "a marvelous destination." She entertained friends from all over the world and welcomed a steady stream of family for more than three decades.

She is survived by five sisters, Noreen King of New York City, Teresa Breen and Ann Latoff, both of New Jersey, and Mary Duffy and Patricia King, both of Ireland; two brothers, James and Mark King, both of Ireland; four stepsons, John Battle of Sag Harbor, Kemp Battle of West Shokan, New York, Craig Battle of New Jersey and David Battle of Connecticut; nine grandchildren; and an abundance of family and friends.

She was predeceased by her husband of more than 30 years, Hyman L. Battle Jr. in 2002. A memorial service was held at her home in Sagaponack on June 14. In lieu of flowers, contributions to East End Hospice, P.O. Box 1048, Westhampton Beach, NY 11978 would be appreciated by the family.

Laura Maud Battle Winstead (2006)

Laura Maud Battle Winstead, 78, died August 11, 2006.

She was born July 7, 1928, in Rocky Mount to Kemp Davis and Maud Bunn Battle and was preceded in death by her only sister, Elizabeth Battle Grossberg.

Mrs. Winstead graduated from St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock, VA, and Randolph Macon Woman's College. At the University of North Carolina at Chapel, she received a master's degree and continued as a doctoral student at the Sorbonne, University of Paris, for two years.

Her first teaching position was at Brennan College, Gainesville, GA. In Wilson, she taught at Atlantic Christian (Barton) College and Greenfield School.

Active in her church, she taught Sunday School and was in the choir, Hispanic Ministry, St. Francis Guild and the Community Soup Kitchen. She held membership in the National Society of the Colonial Dames of North America in the state of North Carolina and enjoyed her friends in The Book Club.

She had a special concern for the work of the Mental Health Association and Alliance for the Mentally Ill.

Funeral, 2 p.m. Monday, St Timothy's Episcopal Church. Interment, Maplewood Cemetery, Section J.

Survivors are: her husband, Emerson C. "E.C." Winstead, Jr; sons, E. Kemp Winstead of Benson, Terry Winstead (Lynn) of Clayton; granddaughter, Michele Flowers (Chris) of Wilson; Terry's children, Tabita, T.J. and Deven; a nephew, Henry Grossberg of Manhattan, NY; an aunt, Mary Battle Shannon of Rocky Mount.

The family will be at home, 3415 London Church Rd, Elm City.

Memorials are suggested to: St Timothy Episcopal Church, PO Box 1527, Wilson, NC 27894, or to a charity of one's choice.

A special thanks to long term caregivers is extended to: Joyce Merritt, Sheron Clay and Janie Williams as well as devotion with a caring concern to the St. Francis Guild.

Hyman L. Battle Jr. (2002)

Hy died Mar. 6, 2002, of cancer at home in Sagaponack, Long Island. A native of Rocky Mount, N.C., where his father was president of the family-owned Rocky Mount Mills, the oldest cotton mill in the country, Hy graduated from the Rectory School and Choate and at Princeton played football.

He joined the Marines at Princeton, going into officer training in 1944, then the reserves in 1946. After earning his LLB from Penn in 1949, Hy practiced in NYC with Battle Fowler, Stokes & Kheel, where he was managing partner until he retired in 1988. He continued of counsel until his death.

Hy first married Peggy Harrison in 1945 and had four sons, Craig, John, David, and Kemp. Divorced, he then married Reine and enjoyed summers with her in Ireland, where they kept a cottage. She survives, as do his sons, seven grandchildren, and a brother, Tom.

Newsom P Battle (1990)

Retired surgeon Battle, dies

ROCKY MOUNT — Dr. Newsom P. Battle, a retired Parkview Hospital surgeon and World War I veteran, died Saturday at the age of 93.

Dr. Battle was born in Tarboro in 1896, the son of John Wilkes Booth Battle and Cornelia Pittman Battle.

He is survived by his wife, Dr. Margaret W. Battle; a son, Octave B. Battle of Wilmington; a daughter, Anne Battle Poole of Reston, Va.; and four grandchildren.

Memorial services were held Tuesday at the Church of the Good Shepard Episcopal, with the Reverends Charlie Penick and Jane Bruce officiating.

Nell Gupton Battle (1961)

Mrs. Nell Battle, First City Librarian, Stricken (from the Rocky Mount Telegram)

Mrs. Nell Gupton Battle, Rocky Mount's first librarian and a recognized community leader for many years, is dead. Mrs. Battle died on Sunday, almost on the eve of her 86th birthday following a long period of declining health.

Funeral services will be held at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning from the Church of the Good Shepherd with the Rev. James Cox of Battleboro officiating. Interment will be in the Battle family cemetery at "Old Town" on N.C Highway 97. Out of respect for Mrs. Battle, the Thomas Hackney Braswell Memorial Library will be closed during the funeral hour.

Among Mrs. Battle's outstanding services to the community was the organization of the city's first public library, which took the name of Thomas Hackney Braswell Memorial Library, and was founded in April, 1922. She was Rocky Mount's first and only librarian for 22 years, and during 1940 she, accompanied by Mrs. Effie Vines Gordon, K. T. McIntyre of Red Oak and Miss Marjorie Beal, secretary of the North Carolina Library Commission, drove all through Nash County and selected 30 stations for bookmobile service.

She had the first bookmobile built, which was taken over by the government for use as an ambulance during the Second World War. However, this work was kept up, and these 30 stations serviced by responsible volunteer workers from each station who came after and returned the books to the local library. This schedule was used until another bookmobile was purchased and a librarian hired, and the work now is done on a regular schedule.

During the Second World War, Mrs. Battle was appointed by the late Millard Jones to keep a record of all servicemen and women from Rocky Mount for the Stat Historical Association.

Mrs. Battle was organist and choir director of the Church of the Good Shepherd for twelve years, president of the Episcopal Women's Auxiliary for three years, and served this same organization as secretary and treasurer for an additional two years. She served many times as teacher in the Episcopal Sunday School, and served in an active and advisory capacity to many civic committees.

She was a charter member of the Research Club, which was the first library club organized in Rocky Mount, and from this beginning, the many literary clubs in the city regularly go to the public library for help on program planning.

In October, 1943, after a severe heart attack, it was necessary for Mrs. Battle to resign her work as librarian, which she did in January, 1944, and the work was taken over by Mrs. Ruth Jeffreys, who had served with Mrs. Battle as assistant librarian for 15 years.

Mrs. Battle was born on October 25, 1875. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Gupton. She was married on November 6, 1896, to Judge Jacob Battle. She was the mother of three children, Mrs. Frank S. Wilkinson and Mrs. E. L. Eatman, both of Rocky Mount, and a son, the late Turner W. Battle.

After Judge Battle's death, Mrs. Battle for a time ran "Cool Springs" plantation n Edgecombe County in addition to her other activities.

In addition to her two daughters, Mrs. Battle is survived by a brother, W. V. Gupton or Rocky Mount; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers for the funeral tomorrow were announced as follows: Edward L. Eatman, Jr., Turner Westray Battle, Jr., Frank S Wilkinson, Jr., Lee Folger, III, Thomas B. Battle, and Turner B. Bunn, Jr. The family requested that flowers be omitted.

Richard Henry Lewis (1917)

DR. R. H. LEWIS DEAD.

Veteran Physician and Prominent Man of Kinston Passes Away.

Kinston, N. C., May 15.—Dr. Richard Henry Lewis, one of Kinston's best-known citizens, died at 1:30 this morning. His condition had been poor for several days. Dr. Lewis was about 85 years of age. He retained his vigor and exercises regularly until the present spring, when his years took toll of his strength. He was an adored character; probably no person in this section was better known or more liked.

Dr. Lewis was born in Edgecombe county, three miles east of Rocky Mount, the second son of Dr. John Wesley Lewis and Catherine Lewis (nee Battle). His family removed to Warrenton in 1837, and from there to Raleigh in 1839. The elder Dr. Lewis became one of the leading physicians of the State. Richard H. Lewis was given an excellent education, attending the famous military school of James M. Lovejoy until 1848, when he entered the University of North Carolina, graduating with the degree of A. B. in June, 1852. Among his classmates were Zebulon B. Vance, Gov. Thos. M. Holt, and Maj. J. W. Wilson, who projected the Western North Carolina railroad through the Blue Ridge, and others who won fame.

After leaving Chapel Hill Dr. Lewis taught school for two years. Then he began the study of medicine, graduating in April 1856 from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania. He practiced medicine for 14 years, excepting a time that he served in the Confederate army as captain of a company of the 15th North Carolina regiment. Ill health compelled him to resign his commission. His practice of medicine included seven years in Edgecombe county, N. C., and seven years in Halifax county, Va. He gave up the profession, when he became principal of St. John's College at Oxford. He was president of the State Teachers' Assembly for two years. He continued to teach for 40 years. He was connected with several leading institutions of the State. He was chairman of the Lenoir county board of education for a time. Hundreds of former pupils of the venerable pedagogue are scattered through State and Nation.

The following children survive: Col. William Lewis, U. S. A.; E. B. Lewis, private secretary to Congressman Kitchin; Frank Lewis, and Mrs. Katherine L. Patrick, the last named three of this city.
